Skæg Jerrick's Burial Mound in Sdr. Saltum

The original Erik Sørensen, known as Skæg Jerrick [English: Bearded Jerrick], lived from 1834 to 1915 and resided in Sdr. Saltum for most of his life. Though self-taught, he was deeply committed to science, the education of young people, politics and the trends of the time. In 1849, Denmark gained a (partly) democratic Constitution, but Estrup governed the country as a dictator, and Skæg Jerrick played an active role in the burgeoning revolt against Estrup's tyranny. For example, he trained the young people of the region in military drills with wooden rifles. Skæg Jerrick concluded his life's work by building a burial mound for himself and planning his funeral down to the smallest detail. Follow the cycle path from Sdr. Saltum vej – all the way to Sdr. Magnificent views of the countryside from Saltum Mountains

Saltum Mountains are made up of a rolling, hilly moraine landscape, formed during the Ice Age. The area features high-altitude areas where cattle have grazed for many years. At the bottom of the valleys, there are streams and small lakes. The grazing by cattle keeps the areas free of scrub, ensuring that the ground gets sunlight. The result is that in Saltum Hills there is an abundance of rare flowers. Saltum Mountains make up a designated Natura 2000 area.

Østrup Wind Turbines

South of Saltum there are six huge wind turbines. The turbines are 150 metres high and together produce electricity for the annual electricity consumption of about 17,000 households. For a period of 20 years, the turbines will contribute DKK 350,000 to fund development in the immediate area. Not bad for so-called peripheral Denmark.

The Lake Nols Multi Area

There is everything from mountain bike paths, hiking trails, ancient mounds, multifunctional tracks, an activity cliff, a viewpoint and a parkour area to playgrounds, the Nols Stadium, an ice skating rink and a delightful open-air cabin with toilet facilities on the shore of Lake Nols. At the scout hut you can stay overnight in shelters and there are several campfire sites in the area. A detailed map of the area is available at the Nols cabin.
